A Sonoma County institution since it opened in 1957, the Flamingo Resort was completely remodeled last year to update the hotel while retaining the midcentury vibe.

"It was a true passion project for everyone involved," says Wendi Gelfound, head of marketing for Point Group, which operates the Flamingo Resort. "It was really important to honor the legacy and the beautiful midcentury architecture."

Set on 10 acres east of downtown Santa Rosa, the renovated Flamingo offers updated guest rooms, a restaurant, pool, hot tub, spa and fitness center in addition to spacious areas for meetings and special events.

"The rebirth of Flamingo Resort embodies our vision to create an environment where guests, locals and team members can embrace spiritual well-being and the adventure of life," says Stephen Yang, co-CEO of Point Group.
